Application Of Intellect Spurs Progress

We are now living in an age where the institution of new and improved products to replace obsolete materials is an everyday occurrence. When, however, this onward march reaches the gates of the steel industry, it comes to an abrupt halt. With man striking outward to unknown destinies he continues to unveil profound and incredible applications of his wonder metal. Such innovations as steel carpeting and fabrics of spun steel fibers are now envisioned for future usage. Even more versatile, however, is the creator himself. Modern man has raised himself to the highest pedestal in all history by applying his knowledge to overcome all adversities. Down the dark paths of progress he continually strides with his fantastic mind being his only weapon.

Encased within the lustrous beauty of any steel object is a demure but majestic expression of strength. This implication of robust depth manifests itself in many different channels. The Unisphere at the 1964 World's Fair is a superlative example of steel's inscrutable expression of quality. After studying the flowing lines of this dynamic creation one can almost envision the words peace, strength, and cooperation engraved in its mighty contours. In still another instance as one watches a shining rocket spewing roaring flames, he becomes electrified with the sensation of the gargantuan strength confronting him.

The activities within a school are a drastically different, but just as efficient mode of expression. We see in activities such as the National Honor Society a reflection of intellect, unity, and cooperation among young scholars and seekers of knowledge. In all aspects of social and educational activities the desires and goals of individual members are readily expressed through active participation in the desired field.

Goals Surpassed Through Usage Of Discipline

In the gargantuan machinery of the steel industry white-hot steel is cast into ingots and rolled to create products which will conform to precise standards. The finished product is a fine specimen and will extend the greatest possible utility to man, who fashioned the molds and predicted the application of his creation. Without concise preparations and rigid standards imperfections would arise breeding inferior merchandise. Learning Gained Through Personal Discovery

Delving into the bygone ages we observe one of our primitive ancestors huddled beside a glimmering campfire. As he scans the heavens he beholds a blazing meteorite scorching a trail towards the earth. With magnificent splendor the glowing projectile screams downward and rips open the earth's crust with thundering brutality. Even with the meager knowledge at his command, early man saw then that the metal within this fallen star would vastly surpass his barbaric stone and wooden implements. This mediocre event was destined to form the foundation for a massive industry . . . steel. Just as that prolific event terminated, so do similar occurences take place each day. Perhaps as accidental as the founding of the steel industry are our personal discoveries. Through education we discover the outstanding traits and talents which individualize us. We discover the competition and the struggle for self-improvement. We discover the intricate human relationships which exist and, most of all, we discover ourselves.

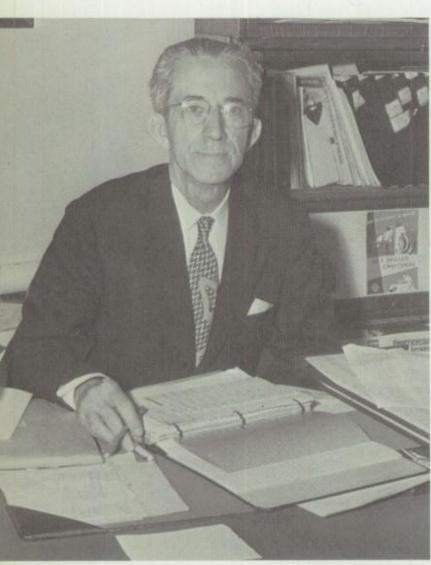

Andrew Carnegie, the "Father of the Steel Industry," was primarily responsible for the rapid expansion of the steel industry in Pittsburgh.

Experience And Devotion Create Superiority

From the towering spires of the Verrazano Narrows Bridge to the stilletto-shaped missles of the Space Age the dynamic virtues of steel are evidenced. Only steel with its quality, abundance, and strength can serve modern man so well in so many ways in his progressive world. Time and time again steel has been proven to be the undisputed king of manufacturing and construction on Earth. Even as man surges into the depths of unknown realms, he still relies upon the wonder metal . . . steel as his primary weapon. Just as noteworthy as the proven leadership of steel, but perhaps not quite as obvious, are the people who have struggled most of their lives for the advancement of their fellow man. These individuals ranging from local school teachers to internationally acclaimed martyrs of the modern world have also proven themselves. They have proven that they are worthy, unselfish people and leaders in a time during which good leaders are scarce.

John Fitzgerald Kennedy, the 35th president of the United States, has been acclaimed as one of the greatest budding political leaders of our time. Until he fell, victim to an assasin's bullet on November 22, 1963, he was, perhaps, the most popular president in United States History.

Vera McKeny industriously and methodically attacks a trigonometry problem in the course of acquiring knowledge which will aid her in achieving success.

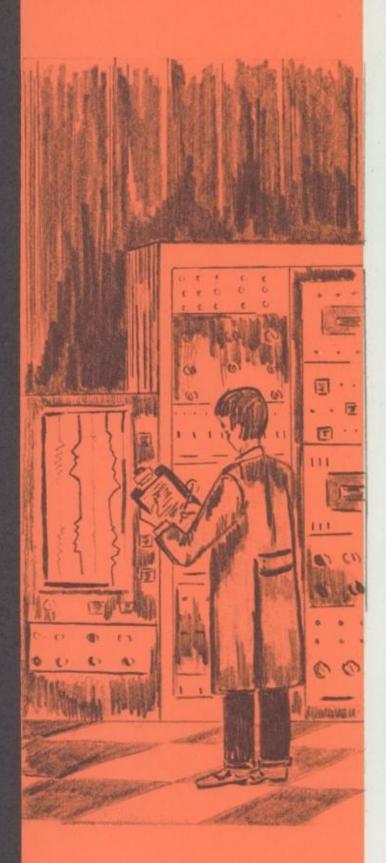

Recorded on the pages of history are many events symbolic of man's pursuit of knowledge. One such quest was evidenced in an eminent experiment performed by Antoine Lavoisier in which he applied his theory that matter is neither created nor destroyed. Lavoisier demonstrated his theory when he transformed a pound of steel into a thin sheet of lustrous plating only thousandths of an inch in thickness.

Today, in a vastly automated world we still observe symbols of our knowledge. The electronic computer, although a labyrinth of complexities, reflects modern man's ultimate degree of knowledge. Scholars of the world diligently at work reflect the struggle to acquire the knowledge that eventually will enable them to make infinite strides along the paths of world progress—the progress that will conduct us to unperceived limits of civilization.

Board Prepares To Meet Future Challenges

To serve the public was an honor, a duty, and sometimes a problem. The Ambridge Area School Board could attest to the truth of this statement as it endeavored, in cooperation with the administration, to maintain and improve educational standards.

In a changing society, there were many challenges for this group to meet. In order to comply with state requirements and to strengthen the educational system, the board met with representatives of the Baden-Economy and Harmony Township school districts for discussions concerning the feasibility of a merger.

Another important phase of the work of the school board was the hiring of administrators, teachers, coaches, and other school personnel. Adoption of a budget for the coming year and of a new salary schedule represented an important accomplishment.

A highlight of the year came with the publication of the school evaluation report. Not only did AHS gain continued accreditation from the Middle Atlantic Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, but it also received a high rating. In looking back over this year, the Ambridge Area School Board could contemplate with satisfaction the words of Charles W. Elliott: "To be of service is a solid foundation for contentment in this world."

Administration

Administrators Emphasize School Progress

In the words of Ralph Waldo Emerson, "Progress is the activity of today and the assurance of tomorrow." Under the capable leadership of Dr. Leo R. Taggart and his administrative staff, the Ambridge Area High School moved forward in 1963-64.

Although progress took many forms, certain innovations, extensions, and projections were especially noteworthy. The introduction of Distributive Education not only made studies more meaningful and practical for students but stimulated the interest of the community.

By adding a third counselor, who was certified as a psychologist, the administration increased the effectiveness of the guidance department. Striking developments in the field of physical education stemmed from the completion of the tennis courts and the new all-purpose field.

Impressive plans for the future called for introducing special corrective work for the students with physical handicaps and erecting a large new gymnasium, which would seat 2,000 to 2,400 spectators on two levels. Including such features as new dressing rooms, movable seats, and large practice areas, the building would fulfill many needs. Through the expansion of present programs and the development of plans for the future, the administration introduced a new era of progress in AHS.

School Personnel

Varied Duties Handled By Capable Staff

Behind every great man hovers an efficient secretary, and in every well-run school a capable clerical staff stands ready to serve administrators, teachers, students, and public. In the Ambridge Area High School, these patient, tireless workers take care of myriads of details, which involve not only office routine but public relations.

Duties . . . ranging from greeting visitors and answering the telephone to keeping records, collecting money, duplicating announcements and tests, issuing supplies, and taking dictation . . . crowd their days. Maintaining their poise and calm in spite of many interruptions and varied duties, the secretaries continue to do their job well.

Whether these unsung heroines work in the office of the superintendent or the principal or in the field of finance, guidance, or curriculum, they ease the load of the administrators and make AHS an efficient and pleasant school.

Miss Josephine Brogno, senior high guidance counselor, played an important role in helping college bound seniors plan their future careers.

Guidance Department

To Question Is Wisdom In Itself

"Listen to advice and accept instruction, that you may gain wisdom for the future." Although King Solomon uttered these words more than two thousand years ago, they are still apropos today. In planning and preparing for their future lives, students at Ambridge Area High School heed Solomon's sage advice and seek the counsel offered by counselors, Mr. Michael Beley, Miss Josephine Brogno, and Mrs. Elsie Keczmer.

To determine the abilities and weaknesses of each student, the Guidance Department administers various achievement, aptitude, and personality tests.

By scrutinizing the results, the counselors can recognize each person's special talents and help him to achieve his greatest potentialities. They can also analyze deficiencies and help individuals to surmount, or compensate for their handicaps.

Besides carrying on the diagnostic testing program, counselors advise students concerning their choice of subjects in high school and provide information about colleges and business and technical schools for those who plan to continue their education. To help those who seek employment, the Department cooperates with the Pennsylvania State Employment Service. Not only does the Guidance staff help students with academic problems, but it also advises them on personal matters that may be troubling

Through the counseling of the Guidance Department, students develop the wisdom to meet the challenge of the atomic age.

Working in conjunction with the Ambridge Area High School Guidance Department, the Bureau of Employment Security tests the manual dexterity of David Kruest.

Well known and liked by the student body, Mrs. Pavlik holds the busy post of secretary in the Guidance Department.

Many juniors are administered the WAIS individual intelligence tests to determine their possible success previous to choosing senior subjects.

Maintenance Staff

Adults Needed In Student World

Whether they are caring for students' health, preparing cafeteria meals, performing janitorial duties, or doing clerical work, the professional staff and maintenance crew provide for the welfare, comfort, and efficiency of the Ambridge Area High School. In the medical department, dentists and doctors examine students at regular intervals, while the school nurses serve the student body, faculty, and administrators at all times. Recently, the introduction of flu inoculations has expanded the medical program.

Not only the doctors and nurses but also the cafeteria workers contribute to the physical well-being of the school by serving wholesome meals at amazingly low prices throughout the three lunch periods each day.

By their faithful care of the buildings and grounds even after the students and teachers have gone home, the custodians do their part to make the school pleasant and healthful for all.

Although their contributions are often overlooked the dedicated adult groups are an integral part of the Ambridge Area High School.

About one-third of the Ambridge student body arrives and departs by bus each day.

New Business Procedures Studied

"It is not the crook in modern business that we fear, but the honest man who does not know what he is doing," is the surprising statement made by Owen D. Young. To help students know what they are doing is the aim of the courses in business arts at the Ambridge Area High School.

Besides teaching future secretaries the latest methods in shorthand with practice in both dictation and transcription, this department offers a new course in notehand for those who wish to takes notes efficiently either in college or for personal use. Typewriting instruction . . . also geared to fit both vocational and personal needs . . . emphasizes speed and accuracy. The operation of other business machines, the handling of the switchboard, and the methods of filing important papers and correspondence get attention in the business training offered by the high school.

From the time when Babylonian merchants kept their records on clay tablets down to the modern complicated computer systems, record keeping has played an important part in the business world. During the two-year bookkeeping course, students acquire a good foundation in this field.

In the urban society of today, adequate knowledge of business methods and procedures often means the difference between failure and success.

English

Communication Lives or Dies With English

"Many a treasure besides Ali Baba's is unlocked with a verbal key," wrote Henry Van Dyke in words which displayed profound insight. Indeed, written and spoken words are the keys to all knowledge. Therefore, since success in science, history, or almost any other field relies heavily upon command of language, the study of English dominates the academic scene.

Appreciation of the importance of this subject as a basic tool has influenced the development of the Ambridge Area High School curriculum and has led to the modernizing of all English courses as well as to the adding of such new subjects as themes.

Understanding the intricacies of grammar, the qualities of proper diction, and the importance of correct spelling and punctuation is only part of this training. The study of great literary works introduces students to the impressive minds of the past. From the pens of poets, essayists, dramatists, and novelists have flowed the magic words. Through Macbeth's self-destructive lust for power and Sidney Carton's heroic sacrifice, pupils gain a broader view of life and a deeper appreciation for literature.

Since knowledge without application is vain, intensive work in composition, combined with recitation and opportunities for delivering oral reports, is an integral part of the study of English. Ability to compose an effective paragraph and to express an idea intelligently is an invaluable asset for college and for later life.

Power through expression, enjoyment through appreciation, and success through comprehension prepare English students at Ambridge Area High School to meet the challenge of the twentieth century.

Fine Arts

Emotions
Expressed
Through Art

"Art is the place of the soul's freedom; there it forgets its dream unhampered; there, age after age, race after race, it gives its dream to the world that is." By encouraging students to find expression for their dreams, the fine arts department at Ambridge Area High School gives meaning to these inspired words of G. E. Woodberry.

Music, both vocal and instrumental, speaks a universal language. Whether the student wishes to express himself by performing or by listening, there is a course or an activity for him. Classes in the appreciation and theory of music, choral groups, band, and orchestra offer fulfillment through the medium of music.

Creation of beauty through painting, drawing, and craft work gratifies the urge for expression of many students. Some seek in art only the satisfaction of the personal desire for creativity; others plan a career in this field. Students also get the opportunity through the fine arts department to enroll in drama classes. There they not only get a chance to act in the plays which the department produces, but they gain a knowledge of the history, development, and technique of the theater.

For the fine arts department, the goal is the creation and appreciation of beauty in its many guises.

Physical Education-Hygiene

Encouraging
Development
By Activity

From the days of the ancient Greek Olympic Games down through the physical fitness program of the late President Kennedy, physical prowess has won adulation and acclaim. The Ambridge Area High School realizes the value of this ability and encourages its development through the physical education and hygiene courses.

In gym classes, students take part in a diversified program which includes activities ranging from rope-climbing and calisthenics to basketball and square dancing. Since the completion of the new courts, tennis augments the traditionally popular sports—softball, basketball, volley ball, and kickball. Speedball is another innovation this year which enlivens the gym period. For those who desire further participation in sports, the high school provides an extensive intramural program in addition to its interscholastic schedule.

Hygiene courses, which complement the physical education program, teach students about physiology, good health habits, and related subjects.

Simonides of Ceos, a poet who lived several centuries before Christ, foreshadowed the present-day stress on hygiene and physical fitness when he remarked that there is no joy even in wisdom unless one has health.

A well-rounded program of physical fitness provides for litheness and gracefulness in appearance.

Preventing further harm to an "injured victim" by the use of the three man hammockcarry, is demonstrated in hygiene classes.

"How high can I go?" wonders Henry Koboski, as he shows his versatility in gym class.

"This is how to write it in Polish," said Barbara Carrodous. "Does it mean that boy can not swim?" exclaimed Casmir Koral.

Languages

Culture Comes Alive Through Languages

"Parlez vous francais?"
"Sprechen Sie Deutsch?"
"Habla usted espanol?"
For a student attending the Ambridge Area High School, the answer to any of these questions is simple: "If you don't speak French, German, or Spanish (or, for that matter, Italian, Polish, Russian, or Latin), you can learn to speak them."

By offering courses in a variety of tongues, the language department meets the challenge presented by a world of technical progress and social change—of shrinking size and expanding population. Whether the student desires to be able to speak and understand a foreign tongue for his business or social life, to read the literature or scientific writings of other nations, or to write in another language, a qualified teacher is ready to guide him.

Traditionally, language study began with classical Latin, from which grew the romance tongues. Many still seek an acquaintance with the language of Caesar, Cicero, and Virgil as a means of gaining a better understanding of their own tongue, as well as sharing in the glory that was Rome.

To gain a knowledge of the speech, customs, geography, and history of either their Latin American neighbors or their European cousins, others turn immediately to the study of a modern language. Imbued with the romance of Paris, French attracts many by its musical flow and sparkling literature. In recent years, increased business with Latin America and the exchange-student program have provided incentives for the choice of Spanish as a second language, while ancestral background or love of opera and music has created a need for classes in Italian. German especially appeals to students of science and mathematics since it holds the key to many scientific writings. The field of diplomacy as well as cultural ties demands the inclusion of Russian and Polish in the language curri-

Language crosses boundaries, spans oceans, circles the globe, and defies time. Through its study, a person may share in the thoughts and participate in the activities of many times and places. Distributive education, a new course taught by Mr. Mulik, teaches the problems of business by giving practical experience in local stores.

Distributive Education

Gain Valuable Experience While Earning

In the Distributive Education course at Ambridge Area High School, interested seniors gain practical training which prepares them for future occupations.

By teaching basic fundamentals in customer approach as well as mathematics and general salesmanship and merchandising, Distributive Education furnishes knowledge that makes students more efficient and valuable to their employers. Not only does the course offer students a natural method of choosing a vocation, but it also imbues them with the spirit to learn, since it illustrates the everyday usefulness of their school training.

Wilmer Mulik

In addition to gaining work experience while in school, students who participate in the program receive compensation for their efforts, and many have earned a considerable sum during their year in Distributive Education.

The public relations value of the program is another important asset; for through this course, the merchants in the community meet and test the products of the school. Whether the student eventually works in his own business or as a manager in an established firm—in the same field or in another, Distributive Education helps bridge the gap between school and the business world.

Distributive Education, a newly instituted program at Ambridge High School, gave students like Tony Garcia an opportunity to work and gain experience while still attending school.

Senior high "librarians" are on hand to help students in the selection of good books.

Library

Sage Advice Through Books

"A war of ideas can no more be won without books than a naval war can be won without ships," was the astute observation of the war president, Franklin D. Roosevelt. In the library of the Ambridge Area High School, students find books covering a wide range of knowledge and ideas from science to fiction. With the shelves well stocked with books and magazines and with more carefully chosen volumes being added each year, the library provides pupils with facilities for both research and enjoyment. Instruction in the use of the library, which every student receives early in his high school career, shows each the possibilities offered by this treasury of past knowledge and current findings.

Besides the general briefing of all students, the librarian teaches the library science classes about the Dewey decimal classification system, the use of the card catalogue, the choice of reference books for particular purposes, and the general mechanics involved in the efficient operation of a library. These students, in turn, apply their knowledge by acting as assistants to the librarian in her varied duties. To assimilate the past, to assess the present, and to foresee the future, students must open the library door and enter the world of books.

Mathematics

Calculating, Today's Role In Technology

That mathematics is a living, growing subject is attested by the recent dramatic innovations in the field. By introducing new topics and de-emphasizing those aspects which are less important, Ambridge Area High School is keeping abreast of these modern changes.

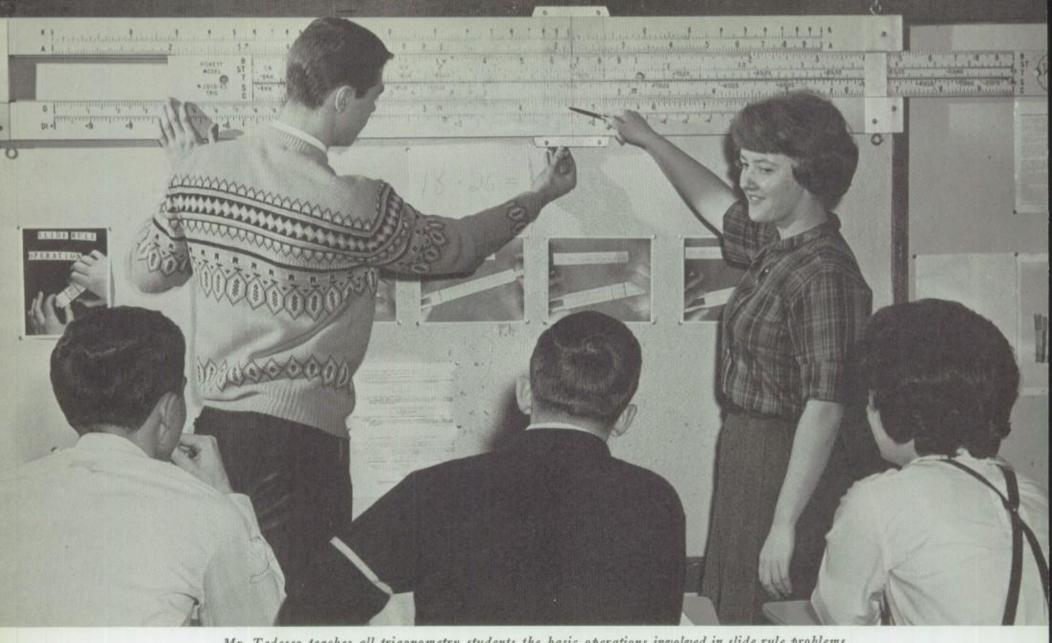

The diversified program offered by the mathematics department encourages all students to develop their abilities to the fullest extent possible. Many pupils who took general mathematics in the ninth grade now study the recently upgraded courses, Refresher Math I and II, in their junior and senior years.

Most college-bound students choose algebra, which is basic to the study of advanced mathematics, in their freshman and sophomore years and follow it in their junior year with geometry, which gives them a new insight into lines, angles, and spaces. When they are seniors, qualified students take a course in trigonometry and college-preparatory math in order to help them meet college requirements for further study in science and mathematics. During this year, too, a few gifted students studied calculus by the programmedlearning method.

Today, mathematics plays a new, significant role in a technologically oriented so-

Many equations can be solved quite easily when they are worked out at the blackboard as one of Mr. Tedesco's students demonstrates.

Practical Arts

Developing Skills For The Future

Whether they elect these subjects in order to prepare for occupations or merely to ready themselves for future home life, the department instills in students a fundamental knowledge of practical skills. Since most girls plan to spend a large part of their future lives as homemakers, the school offers a complete course in home economics, which includes not only cooking and sewing but also such subjects as nutrition and etiquette. A number of girls use the talents which they learn in home economics to forge careers as dieticians, fashion designers, or store buyers.

For the boys, this department offers mechanical drawing and industrial arts classes. By teaching the use of T-squares, triangles, and other drawing instruments, the department trains the architects and engineers of the future. While courses in the metal and wood shops prepare boys to work with their hands as wage earners, they also enable them to create useful articles for their homes.

By serving the dual purpose of preparing students for future occupations as well as for home activities, the Practical Arts Department plays an important role in the high school program.

Boys enrolled in industrial arts courses are instructed in the fundamental operations of heavy machinery.

The proper maintenance of school machinery is stressed in the vocational courses.

Science Moulds Future

In this age of the greatest technological development that the world has ever seen, the scientist has assumed a position of importance and responsibility. To meet the needs of today, the Ambridge Area High School has expanded the science department so that it can fulfill the demands of the student whether he wishes a course in general science or a more detailed study of biology, chemistry, and physics.

Biology, the science which seeks to learn the mysteries of living plants and animals, has fascinated man from prehistoric times. In the freshman year, students may elect this subject, in which the rudiments of both botany and zoology get attention. From the study of the single cell and protoplasm to the consideration of the laws governing heredity, biology helps students to understand themselves and the world around them. When the student begins chemistry in the sophomore year, he turns from the study of living matter to that of non-living. In learning the chemical elements and their properties, the student lays the foundation for an understanding of the atomic age. Through laboratory experiments, he sees what takes place in chemical reactions and learns more about the products that he uses in daily living.

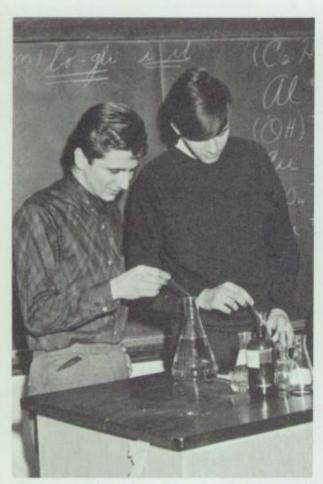

In this day of electronics and nuclear fission, a science program without physics would be incomplete. Therefore, during their junior year, many students elect this course, which demands real concentration as pupils learn the "how" and "why" of the physical world.

Seniors who have shown special aptitude for science may choose the advanced course which includes astronomy, meteorology, geology, and oceanography. Science courses aim to foster the ideals expressed by Michael Pupin when he said: "The worship of the eternal truth and the burning desire to seek an ever-broadening revelation of it constitute what I call 'Idealism in Science.' "

The dissection and study of creatures such as the frog teaches biology students the related structure and functions in the human body.

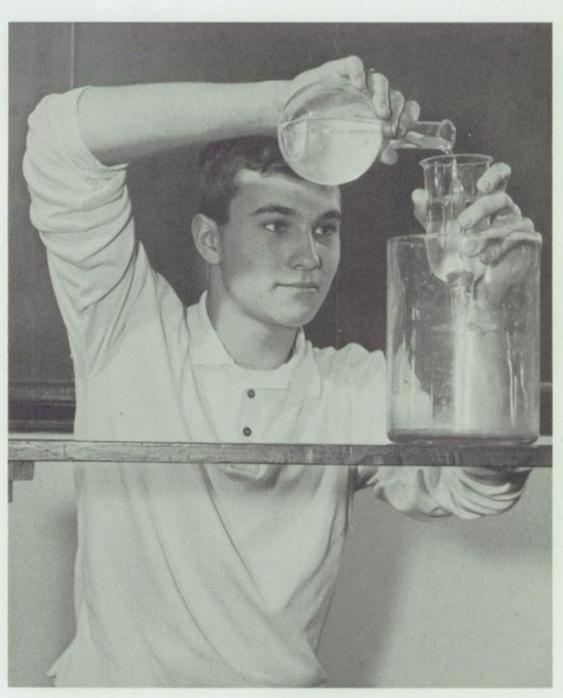

The study of solutions is an integral phase in the study of chemistry.

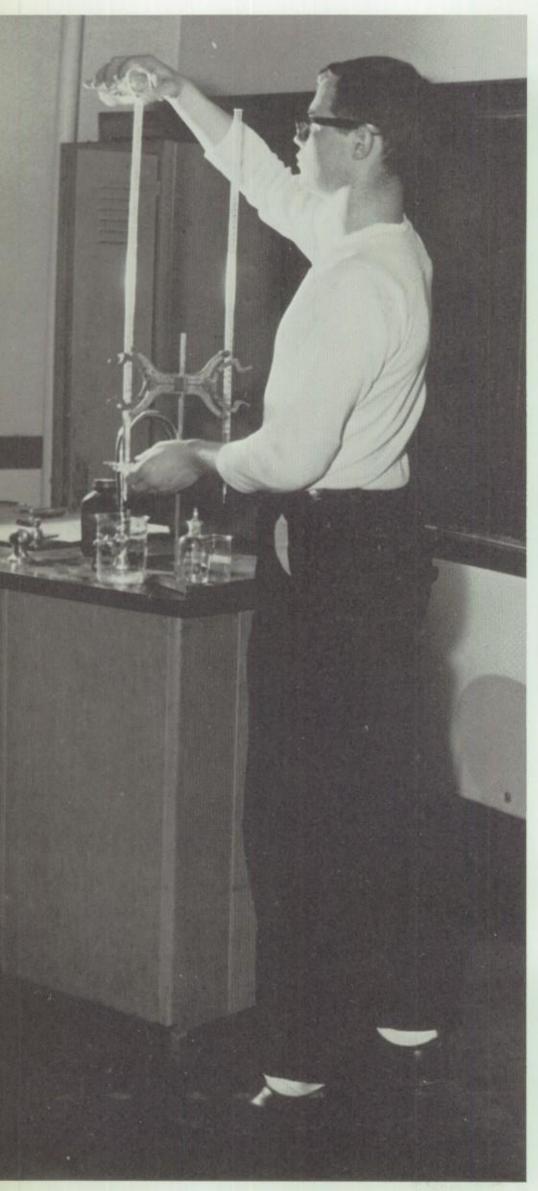

Steve Pavlik utilizes valuable safety instructions in the process of mixing an acid and water.

Physics laboratory experiments never cease to amaze inexperienced students.

Science students illustrate the various force vectors involved in lever classification.

Physiology is one of the numerous fields studied in biological science classes.

Chemistry students record experimental data and anticipate a chemical reaction.

Creative students make illustrations which help them in their study of Ancient History.

Social Studies

History Shapes Democracy's Future

Through the social studies classes at AHS, students prepare to become effective citizens in the world of the future.

Civics provides them with an understanding of the functions of government and instills in them a profound appreciation for the democratic way of life, while Pennsylvania history enriches their knowledge of this state. During the study of world cultures, students trace the gradual development of civilization from the prehistoric cave men to the dawn of the atomic age. After learning about the world in which they live, students focus their attention on the history of their own country by following America's rapid rise to power. Economics, the study of the way people make a living, highlights the first half of the final year, and Problems of Democracy climaxes the social studies program.

Vocational

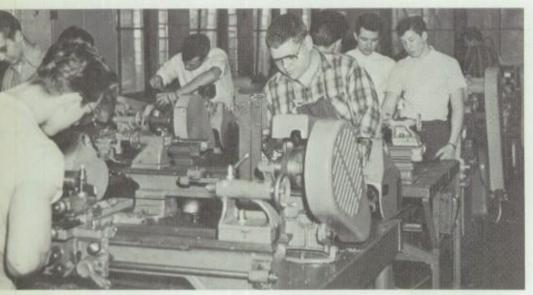

Diversified Program Offers Beneficial Skills

With the advent of the age of automation, skilled craftsmen are gaining a new eminence in modern society. The same technological advances which boosted the standard of living also created an increased demand for skilled or semiskilled workers. For this reason, the Ambridge Area High School prepares its vocational students to meet the challenge of the industrial world by offering them a highly diversified training program.

In the wood shop, boys learn to make patterns, design furniture, and erect buildings. Those who elect to take machine shop develop the skills necessary for efficient operation of modern machines, while those in the electric shop become skilled in home wiring and the repair of electrical appliances. The automobile shop teaches boys to assemble as well as to repair motors and prepares them to become skilled auto mechanics. Since the need for skilled workers is rising sharply, the crafts which vocational students learn at AHS prepare them for bright futures in the modern technological world.

In the auto shop boys destined for careers as automobile mechanics are extensively trained to cope with any malfunction in a car.

Safety techniques and thorough practice with electrical equipment are but two of the many aspects of electrical shop work.

Sweltering molten steel flows from a refiner as one of the multitudes of operations in the process of purification terminates.

The National Honor Society is perhaps one of the most refined and exhalted activities in which the qualified student can participate.

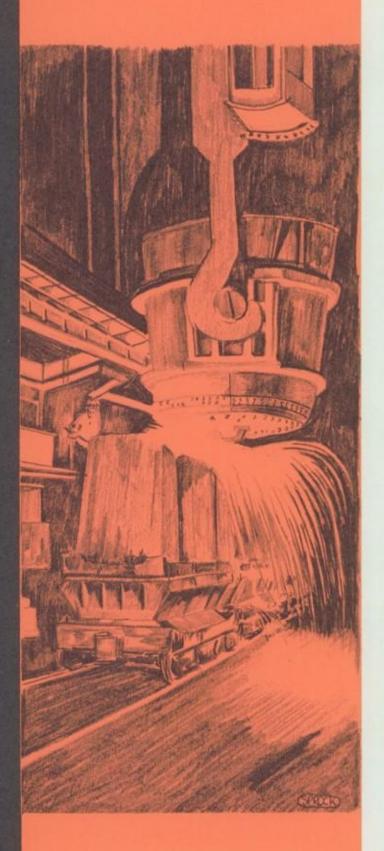

Cradled within the massive restraining walls of a Bessemer converter are tons of sweltering liquid metal. Hidden in the depths of this white hot inferno are the basic ingredients of steel. Also hidden in the liquid mass are various impurities, which for all practical purposes must be removed. Without purification the finished product would be weak and unable to withstand the strains which eventually will be placed upon it.

Every person on earth is presented with some inherent gifts at birth. Throughout his childhood he develops his personal traits and early in his youth he enters some sort of school. At that moment individual refinement begins. Over the years, a fine product is formed through participation in various activities and diversified schooling. These are the prime influences upon the creation of a person of high culture.

National Honor Society

Participants Admitted to NHS By Candle Light

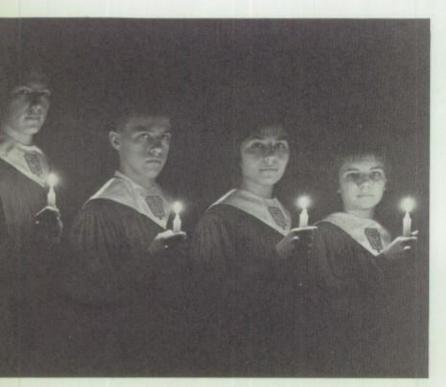

"Make the most of yourself, for that is all there is of you," wrote Ralph Waldo Emerson, and the National Honor Society chooses students whose goal is to make the most of themselves.

Selection for membership in this Society signifies the greatest honor that our school confers upon a student. Only five per cent of the juniors and ten per cent of the seniors attain the qualities of scholarship, leadership, character, and service required to win this coveted mark of esteem. Although scholarship, demonstrated by grades, is the first requisite, admission demands more than academic attainment. The aspirant must display qualities of leadership by participation in activities and acceptance of responsibility. He must also possess character and willingness to render service to his school, his community, and his fellow man.

Admittance is only a beginning, because this organization strives to foster and develop these traits. One of its endeavors is to raise funds for its scholarship through enterprising business ventures. For example, during the football season, members sold garnet and gray pompons and operated a concession stand.

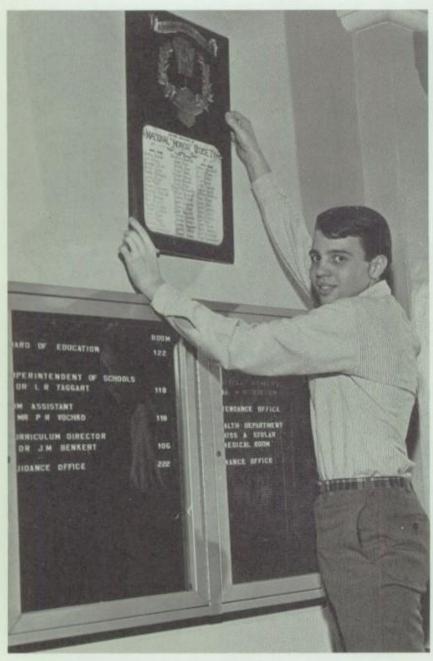

In March, new members from the junior and senior classes were initiated into the Society in an impressive candlelight ceremony. As the light from the candles glimmered brightly in the darkness of the auditorium, within the members, glowed the inspiration to carry the light of scholarship, leadership, character, and service into the world with them.

National Society Admits Go-geters

Under the motto "Toujours Pour Histoire," the National Historical Society embarked upon a year starred by successful activity.

The initiation of the new members proceeded in the traditional manner as the students, clad in the finery of Cleopatra, the rugged accouterments of Attila the Hun, or the attire of some other famous personage, paraded through the halls with the familiar, yet ever-new, buffoonery. In the evening, at the dinner held at McSorley's Colonial, the initiates doffed their costumes and became full-fledged junior historians.

In spite of some frivolity, membership in the Society represents one of the highest honors attainable to students, since only those who earn high grades and pass rigorous screening gain admission to the Society.

Throughout the year, they participated in varied activities, which ranged from such projects as sponsoring the "Harvest Ball" and selling light bulbs to raise money, to attending the state convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Junior Historians in Pittsburgh. A tour of Old Economy acquainted members with some of our local history. The trip to Philadelphia and New York in May climaxed an eventful year for the National Historical Society.

Silhouette

School Paper Portrays Student Life

Projecting the shadow of Ambridge Area High School upon the background of both the school and the community, The Silhouette provided a profile of school life for the students and for the public. Through the paper, which was published by the Beaver County Times, the accomplishments and activities of the school became news.

To many students, The Silhouette was the paper that they enjoyed reading every few weeks to learn who was "In The... Limelight," what had happened, and what the future promised or threatened.

"Of the student, for the student, by the student," the motto of the newspaper, had a special meaning for others. The Silhouette staff, led by Nancy Spadafore and advised by Miss Virginia Griffith, consisted of student editors, reporters, photographers, and typists. Upon these people fell the responsibility for collecting news, writing and editing it, laying it out, and publishing it.

Covering such varied activities as athletics, school plays, candy sales, and projected trips by clubs, the newspaper served as a link between the high school and the community. In addition to bringing the news of the school to the attention of students, the publication awakened interest in the school programs among citizens of the Ambridge area. Through hard work after school and on week-ends, the student staff of The Silhouette published a newspaper that served as an effective force in the life of the school and the community.

Nancy Spadafore is proud of the fine job she did as Editor-in-Chief of the Silhouette.

Student Council

Council Spurs Numerous Activities

The Student Council began another year by sponsoring the annual "Garnet and Gray" get-acquainted dance. Later contributions of the Council to the social life of the student body were: a "Senior Day", a Council-sponsored activity giving competent seniors first-hand experience in teaching classes for one day; several "dress-up days" which created a more formal atmosphere for studies; and the annual Christmas Mistletoe Ball which had "Happy Holly Days" as its theme. Members of the Council also served as guides for National Education Week and made plans for the purchase of a bulletin board for the school as a gift from the 1964 graduating class. In coordination with the school improvement program the Student Council sponsored a "Clean-up Week" to remind the students of their responsibility to maintain the neat appearance of the school building.

Within the club itself the members voted to revise their outdated Constitution. They found it necessary to involve certain changes which would maintain the high standards of the organization.

The Student Council is an important governmental organization which provides a place for the representation of each student's problems or suggestions in regard to student life. It extends to qualified students an opportunity to develop traits of leadership and responsibility in democratic government.

Membership Requirements Stressed

Named after Thespis, the Greek theatrical director who founded the drama in the sixth century B. C., the National Thespian Society, Troupe 1035, endeavored to promote the dramatic arts in the Ambridge Area High School.

Under the leadership of Miss Doris Sherman, the Thespians acted, designed scenery, applied make-up, secured lighting, arranged publicity, and performed numerous other theatrical tasks essential to successful performances.

Attainment of membership in the society was a coveted honor, for only those who met rigorous requirements gained admittance. When an aspiring Thespian earned at least ten points by acting or working in the stage crew, he was formally initiated into the society. "Play your part well, for there all the honor lies," the motto of the National Thespian Society, epitomized the code of the theater and the goal of life.

School Spirit Enlivened By Music

When the rhythmic beating of the drums heralded the approach of the Ambridge Area High School Band, students always felt an upsurge of emotion; for the garnet-and-gray musicians sounded the clarion call of school spirit.

Whether marching 100-strong down the football field, performing intricate drills at half-time, or representing the school at patriotic and civic celebrations and parades, this outstanding group impressed onlookers by its precision and musical ability. Besides distinguishing itself in local activities, the band sent several selected representatives to Midwestern District and State Band Clinics, where they acquired new ideas and techniques. The culmination of many hours of practice came in the spring when the band presented its annual concert, which included both classical and modern numbers. With its high-stepping, batontwirling majorettes and stirring music, the Ambridge Area High School Band gave expression to the spirit of the Alma Mater.

Ambridge High School is proud of its colorful drum major, Tony Bongiovanni, whose genius and agility add spirit to the band's performance.

Choruses

Unparalleled Success Enjoyed By Madrigals

"Music is the universal language of mankind," wrote Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, the famous American poet. Through the presentation of their outstanding vocal programs, the choruses at Ambridge Area High School helped the student body and the community realize the beauty and eloquence of the art that Longfellow termed a "language."

During the past year, the choral department enjoyed unparalleled success. Not only did it present outstanding musical programs, but it secured a place in the All-State Chorus for two of its madrigal singers. After competing with students from ninety-six schools in the Regional Chorus at Northwestern High School, Judy Brown and Bill Soldressen gained the honor of singing in the state chorus before the National Music Educators Convention in Philadelphia on March 12.

In the chorus classes, which composed the madrigal choirs, the students learned to sing both a capella and with accompaniment. After mastering basic techniques, they studied a wide variety of music, ranging from sacred melodies to Broadway show tunes.

Under the adept leadership of Miss Laura Jean Rice, sophomores, juniors, and seniors who met standards of excellence participated in the madrigal choirs. These vocal groups presented an outstanding Christmas concert, which was highlighted by Bach's "Break Forth O Beauteous Heavenly Light." During the yuletide season, they also caroled through the halls and around the Christmas tree in the traditional way. Later in the school year, they heraled the arrival of spring with another vocal concert.

In the years to come, the musical language that the choruses instilled in the students will linger with them as a fond memory.

Members of the All-State Chorus chosen to sing in the National Music Educator's Convention in Philadelphia were William Soldressen and Judy Brown.

Service Organizations

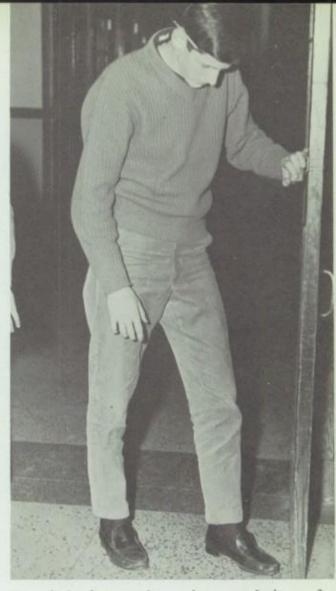

Students Value Services

"No man has ever risen to the real stature of spiritual manhood until he has found that it is finer to serve somebody else than it is to serve himself," was the astute comment of Woodrow Wilson. Through the service organizations at Ambridge Area High School, students had a chance to learn the truth of these words.

Service assumed many guises at AHS. Under the direction of Mr. Kokoski, the hall patrol and the boys' patrol maintained order and directed student traffic both inside and outside the school building.

Other students did their part to create a pleasant atmosphere by posting pertinent and interesting items on the bulletin boards. The responsibility for stage lighting at assemblies and at evening performances fell to another crew of students, while the usherettes showed visitors to seats and provided them with programs. By operating projectors and other audio-visual aids, a group of boys served their teachers and classmates. Other outlets of service open to students included selling tickets and programs, operating concession stands, and participating in the Junior Red Cross and the Decca Club.

In many ways, the students at AHS learned the joy of service.

One of the first people on the scene during a fire drill is Lenny Lancy, whose duty it is to supervise students passing out of the building through the south exit.

Faculty Aid Groups

Group Leaders Aid In Varied Capacities

Helping teachers and administrators perform their duties was the aim of the faculty aid groups. In the gym courses, particularly, students in these organizations played an important role. Tenth-grade girls chosen as Gym Aids helped Mrs. Palmer by checking rolls, reporting absentees, and recording the scores on skill tests. The Leaders' Club composed of girls in the eleventh and twelfth grades who demonstrated athletic prowess, good character, and high scholastic ability, aided Miss Yost during gym classes. This year for the first time, a Leaders' Club was organized in the boys' department, and its members served as group leaders in Mr. Kokoski's classes.

Besides helping in physical education, students worked in a number of other fields. During football games, the Press Box Announcers kept fans posted on plays, penalties, and players. Under the direction of Mrs. Persuitte, the Attendance Aids distributed absentee sheets and helped to check on tardiness, class cutting, and absenteeism. By assisting Dr. Benkert in tabulating semester test scores and conducting surveys, the Ambridge Association of the Junior Curriculum Clubs improved instruction.

Through their participation in the faculty aid groups, students at the Ambridge Area High School developed a spirit of cooperation and responsibility.

Future Teachers of America

FTA Active Career Organization

In its second year of existence, the Ambridge Area High School Chapter of the Future Teachers of America distinguished itself in many fields. Not only did club members participate in a wide variety of activities, but they also learned about the profession that they planned to follow in later life.

Soon after the school year began, FTA members tackled the job of editing the newsletter for the clubs of the Midwestern District. When the newsletter was successfully completed, the club began to plan for its initiation, which was held in the school auditorium in November.

During the autumn, the FTA couducted a car wash in order to raise funds for the spring visit to a college. The "Continental Cupid" Valentine's Dance, which the members held in February, further enlarged the balance in the treasury. However, there was time for merry making; and the FTA celebrated the December holiday season with a Christmas party at the Ambridge Country Club.

On a serious note, senior members of the FTA, along with other qualified seniors, took charge of school classes for a day in March. The visit to a college later in the spring highlighted the year and helped junior and sophomore club members to plan for their future education.

In a year marked by lighthearted merriment and earnest resolution, the Ambridge Area High School FTA forged a place for itself in the life of the school.

Study Clubs

Clubs Provide Interest Opportunities

When Alexander Hamilton said, "Men will pursue their interests," he showed great insight into human nature. To pursue their particular interests beyond the regular classwork, students at Ambridge Area High School formed study clubs in various fields.

Through experiments and scientific reports at their bi-weekly meetings, Science Club members not only increased their knowledge but shared the enthusiasm and inspiration of others. In Quill and Scroll, writers for school publications enjoyed the encouragement, criticism, and companionship of their co-enthusiasts.

Those who loved to match wits joined the Forensic Club, which afforded students the opportunity to debate topics from different viewpoints. The contest of intellects, however, was not confined to debating; for with knights, bishops, kings, and queens, Chess Club members waged fierce battles.

"Touche;" was the cry of the Fencing Club, where members learned in their weekly work-outs to feint and parry with adroit grace and skill. Although it involved less competitive spirit, the Stamp Club aroused no less fervor than the other clubs as the philatelists bought, sold, and traded stamps from countries around the world.

Through the study clubs, the students at AHS developed their own particular interests and shared their enthusiasms.

Yearbook

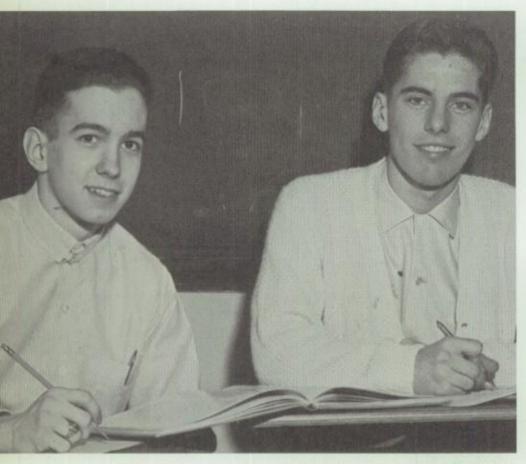

Bridger Winner
Of Coveted
Medalist Award

The creation of a yearbook is a prodigious task. This year the task was made even more formidable by the considerable expansion of the volume and the intense desire to improve upon the nationally acclaimed 1963 Bridger. First Class Honor Rating of the National Scholastic Press Association, an A (excellent) rating by the National School Yearbook Association, First Place Rating in the Pennsylvania School Press Association, the Pitt Award, and the Medalist rating by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association were the most outstanding honors bestowed upon the 1963 Bridger. With a somewhat inexperienced and meager staff Frank W. Desanzo, vearbook advisor, embarked upon the long and difficult journey to publication. The advent of the new school year induced a flurry of brainstorming an eventual crystallization of ideas. Soon, the original dummy yearbook was completed and the staff "got down to brass tacks."

Ensuing months saw the hustling Bridger staff battling to meet publication deadlines. In mid-March the perpetual frenzy and tension finally terminated as the last few pages were mailed to Georgia for primary publication. All that remained now was the proof reading and a few minor adjustments. Conclusion of the initial venture was attained at last. It was a voyage well worth the trouble. Only the student reaction and the critical analyses of a multitude of judges will relate the degree of success which the 1964 Bridger staff instilled in its creation.

This doesn't seem to be a relaxed position, but Sylvia Bedzyk, yearbook artist, does her best work while supporting her sketch on a classroom wall.

Richard Piper and James Billik, copy editors of the 1964 Bridger, occasionally collaborated on division page material.

In addition to typing the copy for the 1964 yearbook, Linda Johnson and Sandra Krayniewski did much of the galley proof reading.

Many new ideas were gleaned from the "brainstorming" of the newest members of the Bridger staff.

Dolores Howanic, business manager, spent most of her time collecting subscription money and contacting yearbook representatives.

The dummy, an invaluable aid to the staff, was reproduced in triplicate by one of the newest members of the staff, Frieda Lacher.

Senior Class Play

Famous Comedy Fascinated Huge Audience

"Charge!" With this battle cry, Teddy "Roosevelt" Brewster met each new crisis in the famous comedy hit, "Arsenic and Old Lace." Under the direction of Miss Doris Sherman and Miss Amelia Karnavas, the Senior Class presented this scintillating play by Joseph Kesselring on February 14 in the high school auditorium. With its charm and wit, the story fascinated the audience. While the two maiden aunts sent one gentleman after another to the "Panama Canal locks" in the Brewster basement with their deadly elderberry wine, a succession of zany Brewsters made their appearance on stage.

As the final curtain fell, the prolonged applause attested that another successful dramatic production had been added to the annals of the Ambridge Area High School.

Aunt Abby and Aunt Martha tell Teddy of the need for a new "canal" in the basement.

Junior Class Play

Rollicking Farce A Big Hit

Forty-eight hours without speaking! For a teenage girl, this seemed an impossibility. Yet, in the Junior Class Play, "I'm a Family Crisis," the earth-shattering event actually took place.

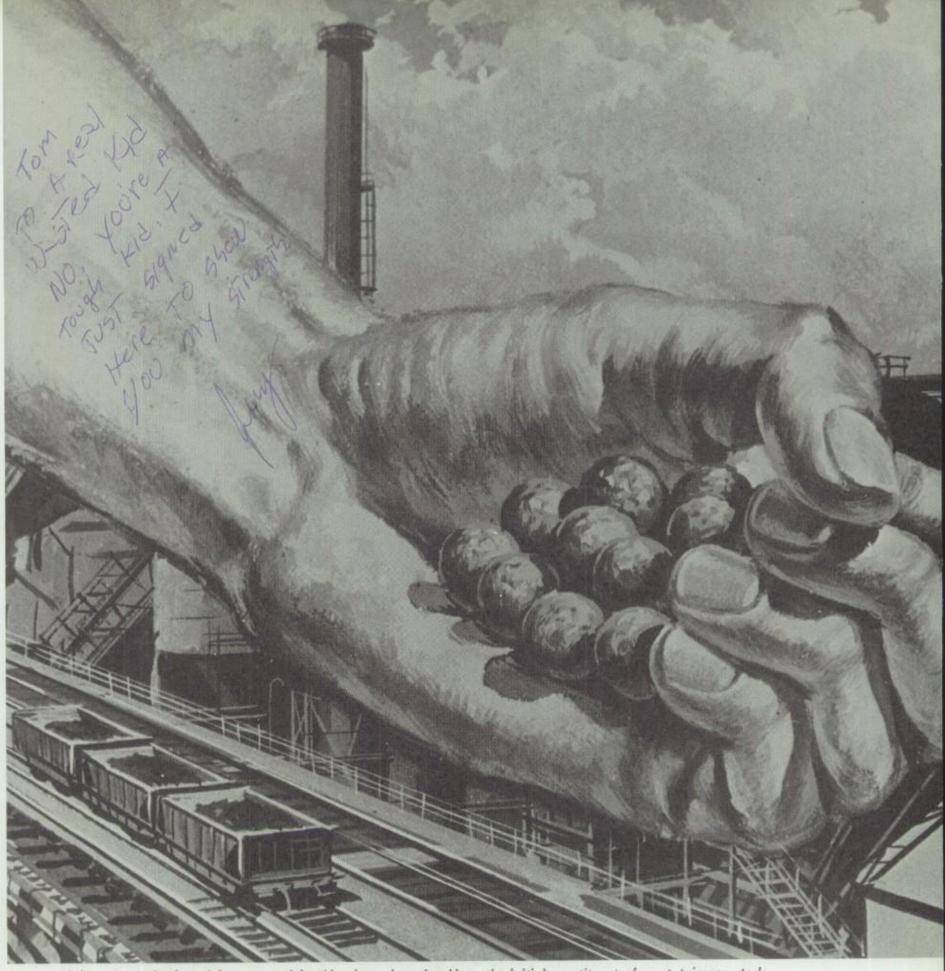

On Friday evening, December 6, the juniors presented their rollicking farce before an enthusiastic crowd in the high school auditorium. Written by Esther Olson and directed by Miss Doris Sherman, the play was full of laughter and excitement as Peggy, the girl pledged to silence, precipitated one crisis after another. When the heroine finally terminated her muteness, events moved swiftly toward a climax.

With its hilarious incidents and youthful charm, "I'm a Family Crisis," won a smashing success at Ambridge Area High School.

"I'm not crazy;" exclaims Rebecca Terpok to the "man in white," Bruce Tedesco.

Varsity Football

Average Year— Five Wins, Five Losses

The 1963 Bridgers opened the football season at Ambridge against a hopeful Norwin eleven. The mighty Bridgers whipped the stunned Norwin team by a 32-18 score. Some 6,500 fans looked on to see Tom Zelesnik team up for the first time with Gary Lively for a total aerial gain of 181 yards against New Castle. This time the Garnet and Gray pulled a 31-13 victory "out of the bag".

By half time in the third game the Bridgers had zoomed to a 27-0 lead over the helpless Har-Brack Tigers. The final score was 33-14, in favor of Ambridge.

Beaver Falls finally stopped the highly rated Bridger offense cold in a 12-0 victory at Ambridge. Time and again Ambridge could not penetrate the rigid Beaver Falls line and at the end of the game were without a single tally. Next Ambridge traveled to Sharon where they defeated the Sharon Bengals. Lively, Fitzgerald, and Barth each scored for a total of 18 points while Ron Kamzelski downed White of Sharon in his own backfield for a safety. The board at the end of the game read Ambridge 20, Sharon 6. With a respected record of four wins and one loss, the Bridgers next met Central Catholic at Ambridge. The final score was 14-12, the Vikings favor.

After this heartbreaking defeat, Ambridge journeyed to Ellwood City. The result of the long, disappointing evening was 20-6 with Ell-wood City on top.

The game that was to prove the potential strength of Ambridge was played at the Butler stadium. The Bridgers puzzled the awe-stricken Tornadoes for better than two quarters. However, Butler's unbeaten team took advantage of a fumble and an intercepted pass in the second half to defeat the battling Bridgers, 20-7. After three straight losses, it was just about time for the Bridgers to explode, and explode they did in their final home game against a bewildered Farrell eleven. After a fifty yard dash to paydirt by John Barth, the Bridgers secured an insurmountable lead. The eventual outcome was a 20-7 hard fought Bridger victory.

Bridgers Outplayed By Rival

The traditional battle commenced when John Barth took the kickoff, picked up blockers and raced 90 yards for a touchdown. The Quip's first tally followed a pass from Sakal to Plodinec who galloped around the right end for the score. After Plodinec intercepted an errant Bridger pass, the Quips were seen plunging across the goal again. Jack Lively scrambled for a first down and Gary Lively then passed to Barth for the final Bridger tally. The Quips dominated the last half with two touchdowns by Mann. The final score read

Junior Gridders Break Fatal Losing Streak

This year for the first time in many years the junior Bridger squad notched a miraculous double victory and a suspense filled draw. The Bridgers previously had not won a game for two consecutive seasons, however, this year they looked like a power-house of strength and managed to break their losing streak.

Coach John Kokoski is to be commended for his monumental efforts and valuable time, for he alone had molded the 1963 Bridger junior football players into a winning team.

In the opener the "little"

In the opener the "little" Bridgers dropped a tightly contested 13-6 verdict to Ellwood City on the winner's turf. Both teams suffered from opening game jitters, but the Wolverines were able to escape the grasp of the plague and hang on for the win. The next game was played at home with a tough Beaver Falls line. The Bridgers clicked time and again for the needed yardage and soon found their first victory, 13-0.

Their second encounter was with the rugged Highland Suburban team. In this game Sysley, with good blocking, plunged 4 yards for a touchdown. Cybak directed the ball through the uprights for the extra point to put the Bridgers on top to stay, 7-0.

The final outing found the Bridgers traveling to Aliquippa for their real test. The game moved fast without a score. Finally Aliquippa scored, but was unable to muster the extra point. Ambridge fumbled and Aliquippa took possession once again, however, the sharp tactics of Sasowski found the Bridgers with the ball. After Sasowski's interception the Bridgers marched 73 yards for the tieing tally. The game ended in a deadlock of 6-6.

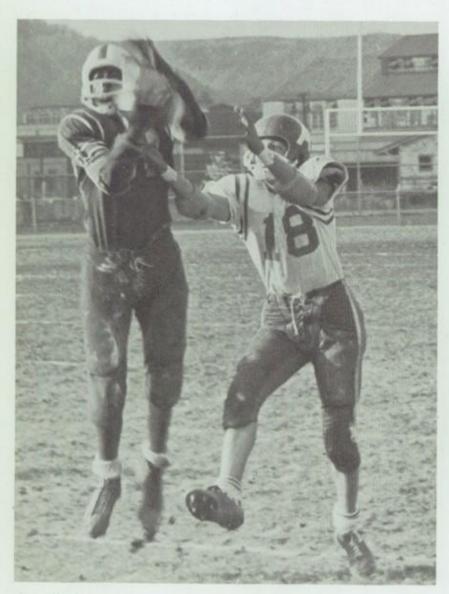

Following this punt the Bridgers prepared to defend against an onslaught of Highland Suburban blockers.

Experience Lacking In 1963-1964 Bridgers

For the second consecutive vear the vouthful Bridger cagers lacked experience in varsity play. The majority of the season saw only one regular senior in the line-up. The remainder of the squad consisted of talented juniors who worked their way to permanent positions. One unfortunate junior was plagued with leg trouble that gradually led him to the bench for recuperation until next year. However, even with little experience and sprained ankles the battling Bridgers managed to win five season contests: three of the Bridger victories came in exhibition play prior to regular season play of Section Three in WPIAL competition. In the opening contest against a rugged New Brighton five the Bridges managed to take the Lions in an overtime tilt. The Bridgers were rated as the Cinderella team, but proved tough when the going was rough. The squad from Ambridge traveled to Moon where they trounced another young club. In the Christmas tournament against Hopewell, the Bridgers earned their third victory.

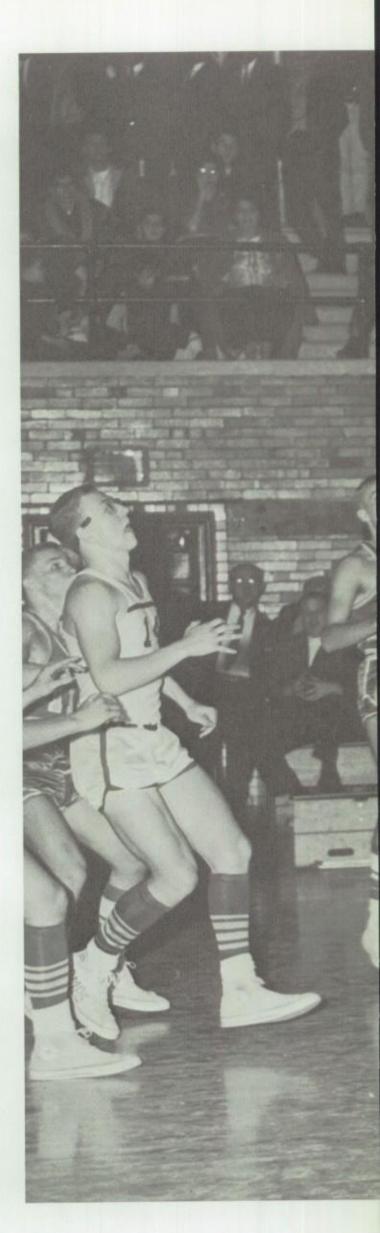

In Section Three play the Bridgers racked up only one win against many setbacks. On the home court with Beaver Falls the Bridgers tasted a league victory for the first, and as it turned out, last time. The fans loved the victory and boasted that they would soon be the champions, however, disappointment after disappointment led the dragging Bridgers to last place. Although the season was something to forget, the Bridgers were able to send a feeling of tendor and alarm through such powers as New Castle, Sharon, Farrell, and Aliquippa.

The final game of the season, a non-league tilt against Hickory, saw the Bridgers end the season in the form of a professional club by whipping their opponents by a score of 68-57.

The Bridger hoopsters and coaches are working to build a successful future club through experience. The fans and student body are also looking to the future so that they may display their stored enthusiasm.

Bridgers Hurt For One Run In The Pinch

Steve Garay acted as the AHS baseball coach for the season of 1963. This was his second consecutive year in this capacity.

The Bridger baseballers came into league play with four victories from the exhibition season. Bridger hopes for the county title were running high after the first W.P.I.A.L. scheduled game with Aliquippa, and the Bridgers increased their winning streak to three games before dropping their fourth game to a hustling squad. The most outstanding members of the 1963 squad were Bill Bufalini, the Bridger second sacker, Gene Jakubowski, the teams first catcher and quarterback, Nick Homziak and Larry Deep, catchers. The effective arms of John Barth, Hilton Young and Dennis Cottage led the Bridgers to a 50-50 season. The third base position was thoroughly taken care of by James Billik. Tom Zelesnik, Bob DeMacio, and Jim Aspiotes held permanent positions in the outfield. The slumping Bridger aces won only one other contest in the '63 season, but lost their games by one run margins. The Bridgers finished with a 4 wins and 4 losses column.

Work on the new baseball field and diamond was completed in the late fall of 1963. Last year the Bridgers completed their season on the grounds at Boro Park, but the '64 squad is expected to use the new facilities on the school grounds.

Gene Jakubowski served as catcher and team quarterback for the majority of the season.

Weightmen Loft 63 Bridgers To Successful Season

The 1963 track and field season was successful as far as individual feats were concerned. As the case often is on the Ambridge squad, the strength of the team was in its outstanding weight men. Veres, Sarar, and Staryazar teamed up to win the W.P.I.A.L. Discus-Relay trophy. They also placed well in the shot-put relays.

Shelaheda and Sysyn both placed well in the high jump; Bilyk was the Bridgers most outstanding pole vaulter while Johnston and Smarsh did the hurdling.

Bridger speedsters were hindered by illness, but Alushin led the distance runners to gain a few honors, Lansberry, Wegrzynowicz, Deamer, and Bilyk led the quarter milers; in the 220 Fitzgerald placed high.

The 1964 Bridger trackmen will be young and eager to gain the ability that left with the class of '63 and have a bright future ahead of them.

Through hours of practice, high jumpers develop coordination and agility.

Mr. John Chapala headed the 1963 Bridger weight team. The Ambridge weight squad led all others in W.P.I.A.L. competition by breaking record after record in the discus and the shot-put throws.

Larry Alushin burst from the start as the leader of the Bridger thinclads, but, Mike Kastrounis, a junior, and his lightning speed eventually surpassed Alushin. Allen Parapot, a junior, worked his way to the third position on the successful Bridger Harrier squad. Bob Ronczka, Rich Janicki, Don Naugle, and Pat Bilyk were also high point scorers.

Ambridge placed fourth in Western Pennsylvania at the W.P.I.A.C. qualifying meet on the Aliquippa links. The '63 season proved to be one of the most successful seasons for the Bridger distance men in many years. Their final record was 8 wins with only 1 loss.

The 1963 Ambridge High School golf team concluded the Section 8 schedule with a record of 5 wins and 5 defeats. The Bridgers whipped Monaca twice, split with Aliquippa, Center Township, and Hopewell, and lost two matches to the Moon Township golfers.

Leo Saunder collected 15½ points to pace the scoring. He was followed by Bill Kulish with 13½ points and Earl Fischl with 13 points.

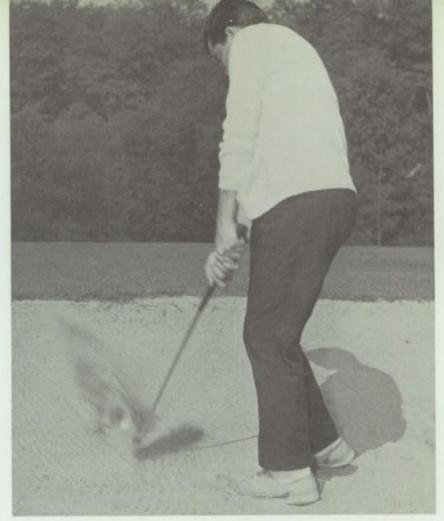

The 1964 golf squad will depend primarily upon the golfing finess of returning lettermen, Woloshan, Saunders, and Kulish. Golf coach Leonard H. Yale Victorious For Sixth Consecutive Year

Yale defeated Princeton for the sixth consecutive year in the thirty-second annual girls' all-star basketball game. The two teams were well matched and the contest is one that will long be remembered by the capacity crowd that overflowed the gymnasium balcony.

Princeton dominated the first quarter of the game by stacking up 6 points to Yale's 3. The second quarter saw a turnabout as Yale had a well established lead of 21 to 9 at half time.

In the second half of the game Princeton did most of the scoring, but Yale came out on top with a twelve point margin. The final score was Yale 28, Princeton 16.

Since the start of the Yale-Princeton classic in 1932 Yale has won nineteen of the thirtytwo games, while Princeton has been victorious in ten contests. Three of the games ended in a tie score.

To be eligible as a candidate for Yale-Princeton a girl must attend two-thirds of all the intramural basketball practices.

She must have an outstanding playing ability and also must maintain a good scholastic average. She can then be selected for a position on one of the teams. No one, not even former players, is assured a position unless she can meet the necessary requirements.

Intramural sports is an after school activity offered to interested boys and girls who want to further develop their athletic abilities. Under the guidance of fourteen qualified instructors, the participants practice basketball, volleyball, tennis, bowling, softball, iceskating, and various other sports.

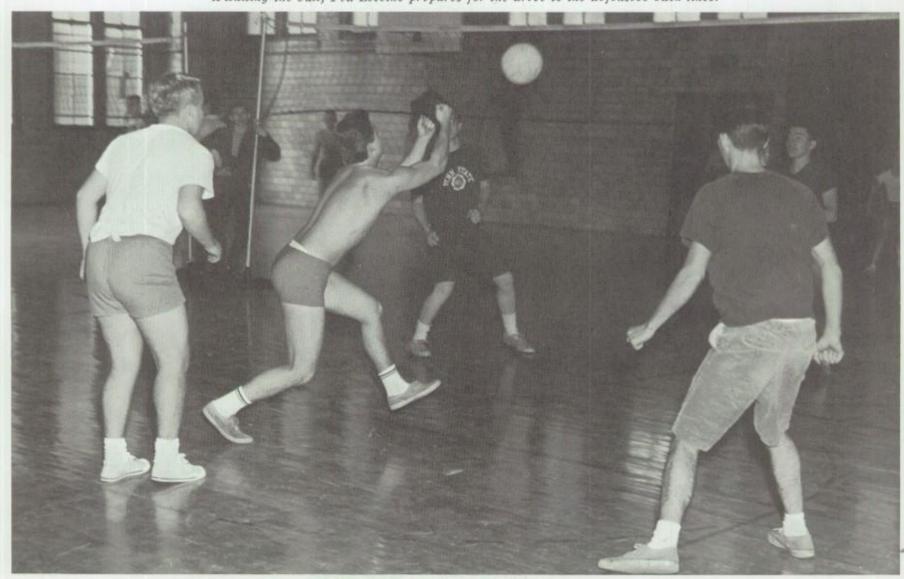

This extra-curricular activity proves beneficial to every participant. It not only provides enjoyment, but also improves coordination, agility, strength, and the physical powers of every participating individual. It is a great contribution to the well being and the physical fitness of all.

Through the endless efforts of Mr. George Kisiday the recreational facilities of the Greater Ambridge Area and the high school have been increasing by leaps and bounds. Recently four asphalt covered tennis courts, which may be transformed into a large iceskating rink in the winter, have been added in order to further the variety of intramural sports. A new baseball field has been completed and will soon be available for intramural use.

There are also plans for the installation of an indoor golf net. In the very near future many of the young people of Ambridge will be able to improve their "drive" before the beginning of the summer golf season.

Dave Drake and Barbara Yurkovich get plenty of bending exercise while making their daily rounds delivering attendance reports to the various classrooms.

Memories Linger As The Future Rolls Ahead

Many memories flash through the minds of the 403 seniors, as the Class of 1963 inscribes "finis" to its high school career. Sadness, joy, laughter, tears are mingled as we linger among these memories for a moment before proceeding to the future.

We remember the pep rallies, when we cheered the coach and the team; the heartbreaking loss to our crossriver rival, Aliquippa; the Mistletoe Ball with the glitter and promises of Christmas; the class play, "Arsenic and Old Lace," with its scintillating wit; the senior prom with all the glamour and pageantry attendant upon the crowning of the king and queen; baccalaureate and commencement with their impressive pomp and ceremony. Our reminiscences embrace also the hours of concentrated study, the "cramming" for tests, the College Boards, the research papers, the recitations, the report cards, and the many incidents and friendships that fashioned our school days.

These years, however, reached far beyond the narrow confines of a building on Duss Avenue and the happenings there. The Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty was a step that we took with the rest of the world toward a new frontier. The assassination of President Kennedy shocked us, and the days of mourning touched us, too. The memories linger on even as the future rolls ahead. As Oscar Wilde, the famous English author, once wrote: "Memory is the diary that we all carry about with us."

SENIOR CLASS OFFICERS-Larry Sanderson, Treasurer; Linda Johnson, Secretary; Rhonda Schimonsky, Vice President; and David Drake, President.

Football assemblies were a riot with the boisterous antics of the senior skits.

Seniors interested in teaching careers had their opportunity to take the places of teachers on March 1. Sandy Krayniewski replaced Mrs. Nicholson.

Juniors Look Forward With Anticipation To Final Year In Ambridge High School

"Practice is the best of all instructors," wrote Publius Syrus, an ancient Roman sage in words that aptly apply to the members of the Junior Class. During the past year, our instruction continued through our participation in classes, activities, and social affairs.

Subjects, ranging from Macbeth to driver training, challenged us to a greater appreciation of knowledge, while we reached the intellectual pinnacle of the year with the induction of a few from our class into the National Honor Society in an impressive candle-lit ceremony.

Along with our more concentrated academic efforts went our increased activity in various clubs and projects. All of us glowed with pride as our class play, "I'm a Family Crisis," convulsed a packed house. By conducting car washes and other moneyraising drives, we financed the traditional highlight of our social season, the Junior-Senior Prom.

Now we look back with satisfaction upon another year of practice and forward with anticipation to our final year at Ambridge High School.

Sophomore Class

Sophomores Adjusted to Senior High Face Future Years With Enthusiasm

"The price of wisdom is above rubies," wrote an ancient seer of Israel. Through academic endeavors and extra-curricular activities the proverbially wise Sophomore Class proceeded with its collection of the precious jewels of learning.

At the beginning of the year, the influx of students from Baden-Economy and Highland joined with the pupils from Ambridge; and from this "melting pot", our class emerged with a strong school spirit and unified goals. Together, we elected our class officers and progressed with our studies . . . suffering the tragedies of the French Revolution with Marie Antoinette and learning with Silas Marner that gold is not of prime importance. We also took part in school activities . . . clubs, intramurals, and other projects. Many of us engaged in interscholastic athletics, forming a solid basis for our teams of the next two years. Whether participating in sports and clubs of studying world history, mathematics, and science, we adjusted to life in senior high school and looked forward to our future years as Bridgers.

Freshman Class

Freshmen Lay Foundations For Tomorrow With Much Consideration And Expectancy

"'Tis education forms the common mind: Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined." In these lines, Alexander Pope expressed his profound belief that education serves as the basis for later development. Perhaps the Freshman Class pondered these words as it began its high school career in September; for this period was a time of beginning . . . a time of choosing . . . a time of bending in the way that we would go.

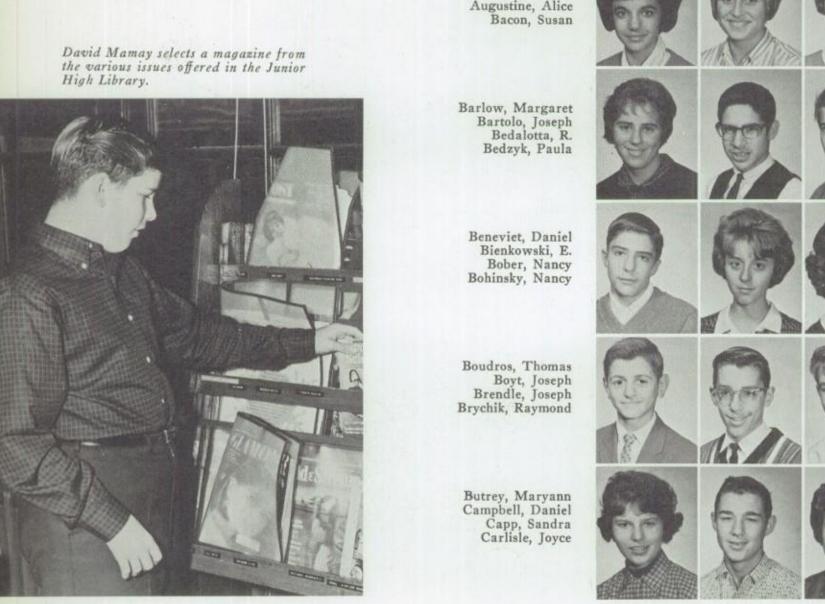

First we decided upon a course of study that would give direction to our education, and next we selected the particular subjects that would guide us along the way. Then, since life would be incomplete without fun, we also tried our wings in extra-curricular activities, such as chorus, football, or basketball. Of course, we attended the high school games and cheered vociferously.

By the selections that we made this year, we laid the foundations on which we shall build our future years in high school and in life.

Tons of raw materials penetrate factory walls by freight and are processed within. Eventually the finished products will require advertising to exhibit their qualities.

The prominence of Ambridge as a thriving community is immediately evident upon arriving in the town.

From all corners of the earth raw materials flow into our community. Within the confines of the various factories ingenious minds and myriads of intricate machinery unite to fabricate from crude steel the products which will satisfy consumer demands. Extensive advertising illustrates the diverse attributes of the finished products to concerned buyers, fulfills consumer demands, and facilitates expansion in our town's industries.

A scholar, according to his individual capacity, develops his natural resources to the best of his ability. After completing his education, an individual strives to advance in life through application of his acquired knowledge. The achievement of successful goals is significantly contingent upon the personal initiative involved in demonstrating his inherent virtues to his employer and the world. In other words, we all invariably must, in a sense, advertise ourselves if we desire advancement in life.

no seas he hasn't crossed-no terrain he hasn't viewed from the skies.

But the age of discovery is just beginning

Our frontiers are now in the stars and under the seas. They're in space craft, laboratories and workshops. Our charts of the mysteries of science, medicine, industrial research are still crude and incomplete.

Courage is still required. Great persistence is a necessity. The rewards are unimaginable. But with this kind of challenge, today's pioneers must shape themselves in the classroom. A 20th Century explorer needs special knowledge—a mind trained to the stiff requirements of today's discovery.

Armco has a special stake in this kind of pioneering. Many of the most important advances in the steel industry have been born in our laboratories and mills. That's why Armco puts such a high value on a firm educational foundation. We've seen its results first-hand.
